

Béjar and Francia mountain ranges

This Reserve lies in the Mediterranean region, but there are several areas with a clear Eurosiberian influence, lending a vast wealth of natural resources to the area, which is home to fascinating spots where both regions converge.

The superb conditions of these ranges, which boast an exceptional environmental and cultural heritage, make this Reserve a truly exceptional place. More than 450 km have been declared long distance trails (Senderos de Gran Recorrido), all clearly signposted and with explanatory panels providing an insight into their particular features and attractions. Each one focuses on a specific aspect of the Biosphere Reserve, addressing aspects such as the natural, cultural and historical resources that can be found there.

Las Batuecas - Sierra de Francia

According to the dictionary of the Real Academia de la Lengua, to "be in Las Batuecas" is to be distracted and oblivious to something: meaning, to be engrossed and fascinated. Feelings of this kind are still felt today by the people who visit this secret valley, protected by escarpes mountains and containing a beautiful Mediterranean-type forest.

Add to this the valuable cave paintings from the Neolithic era that can be found in the valleys caves and shelters, the high cultural value of the legends of Las Batuecas and the ethnographic and architectural collection of the village of La Alberca, and we find a space without comparison in all of Castilla y León. In the deepest part of the valley is the Carmelite convent of San José. The convent entrance is the starting point of another trail on foot which takes us to the Cascada del Chorro (waterfall) and also enables us to enjoy the scenic beauty of Las Batuecas.
